Voyage: Spring 2013
Discipline: DRAMA
Course Title: Theatre and Religion
Division: Upper
Faculty Name: Susan Kattwinkel
Class Time: 10:50 – 12:05 B Days

Pre-requisites: None

COURSE DESCRIPTION
Religion and theatre have been intimately connected in nearly all parts of the world since theatre’s earliest beginnings. This class will examine some of the theatrical forms where this connection has been the strongest. Although we will encounter some western theatrical forms like ancient Greek theatre and medieval European theatre, we will primarily focus on eastern theatres, in keeping with our voyage itinerary. In much of Asia, theatrical forms remain expressions of religious traditions and texts. We will look at the Buddhist-influenced theatrical genres of China and Japan, the Hindi-influenced genres of India, the Islam-influence theatre of Malaysia and also consider the role of local folklore and superstition on theatres in Africa. There will be one field assignment involving a written response to a theatrical production we see onshore, and there will be multiple opportunities to see more theatre in multiple ports.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

- Develop a working knowledge of the major performance practices of countries visited in spring 2013.
- Be able to articulate some of the main themes connecting performance and religious practice.
- Identify connections to religious concepts in a theatrical performance and communicate those connections both orally and in writing.
- Demonstrate an understanding of the concepts of tourist performance through an oral analysis of your personal experience as an audience member at a performance.

FIELD WORK

FIELD LAB

Cochin, India, Mar 6, 2013

Participation in the Field Lab is mandatory. Attendance for the entire lab and the resulting response paper will constitute 20% of the course grade.

Traditional Dance-Drama of Kerala

For this field lab we will visit two theatres and their accompanying museums to get exposure to a variety of traditional dance-drama forms. First we will visit Fort Cochin – an area in Cochin showcasing colonial culture and traditional arts of Kerala. There we will visit Greenix theatre and museum, where we will see a performance of traditional Keralan dance forms. Afterwards, we will visit the Kerala Folklore Museum and Theatre. At the museum we'll see examples of masks, puppets, props, etc., historically used in a variety of dance/dramas and other art forms. After watching the performers put on face makeup and prepare for performance, we will view a performance presenting several traditional forms of Indian performance.

Students will write a six-page paper following the field lab that will compare this performance they saw to another performance they viewed in terms of one of the following themes: 1) the sacred (or non-sacred) space; 2) the embodiment of deities or other supernatural beings; 3) the representation of religious texts; 4) the tourist audience in dialogue with religious performance; or, 5) the use of religious themes for political or practical purposes.

Each student will also present their paper, or an abstract thereof, on a Chautauqua panel, open to our shipboard peers.

FIELD ASSIGNMENTS

- Students are required to see at least two other performances that fit into a broad description of religious performance during the voyage. Students may select a performance from a suggested list, or may attend an individual performance. Students may encounter religious performances at any time. These will count as witnessed performances even without prior approval if 1) you are able to observe the performance for at least 15 minutes, and 2) if you are able to bring back visual evidence (photos) of the performance. In the absence of sufficient available performances, visits to museums featuring relevant theatrical forms will be acceptable. (A list of these will be provided for you.)
- As part of the participation grade, after each port call, students will discuss performances seen, and share photos or other ephemera. Please contribute your observations of productions viewed and listen actively to those observations if you did not see the performance.
Students will submit 2-3 page reports for two performances seen independently.

METHODS OF EVALUATION / GRADING RUBRIC

1. Attendance and Participation, 10%
   Students are expected to participate in all discussions, both faculty led and student led. Active contribution to in-class discussions will contribute to your grade.

2. Quizzes on Readings 10%
   This course requires significant reading of plays and essays on performance. In order to participate fully and get value from the class students must keep up with the reading material. There will be several very short unannounced quizzes based on the day’s reading.

3. Final Comparison Paper 25%
   Students will write a six-page paper following the field lab that will compare this performance they saw to another performance they viewed in terms of one of the following themes: 1) the sacred (or non-sacred) space; 2) the embodiment of deities or other supernatural beings; 3) the representation of religious texts; 4) audience reception of a religious message or themes; or, 5) the use of religious themes for political purposes. A full assignment and rubric will be provided to you. Final Papers will be due the morning of April 18.

4. Chautauqua 15%
   Students will present their final papers (or an abstract thereof, depending on class size and time) at a panel presentation, open to the ship. Panels will be created based on the topics of papers, and each panel will have a brief discussion following the presentation of papers. A full assignment and rubric will be provided to you.

5. Performance Reports 20%
   Students will submit 2-3 page performance reports for two performances of theatre with a religious components. A full assignment and rubric will be provided to you. Performance reports will be due three class days after leaving that particular port.

6. Final Exam 20%
   The final exam will be cumulative, concentrating on terms relating to the religions and theatres we examined, and short essay questions demonstrating your understanding of the concepts discussed in class. A full study guide will be provided to you.
